COLUMBUS DAY DECISION?

Group pushes for Indigenous Peoples' Day; Sons and Daughters of Italy lodge president, Italian-Americans upset

By STEVE BUCHIERE
sbuchiere@fltimes.com

GENEVA — Tony DiCostanzo readily acknowledges that the European colonization of the Americas is not without its dark moments — from slavery to the loss of Indigenous populations. However, DiCostanzo, president of Geneva Lodge 2397 of the Order Sons and Daughters of Italy in America, doesn't think it's fair to put the blame on Christopher Columbus, the Italian-born explorer who, sailing for Spain, is credited with ushering in European colonization of the Americas. DiCostanzo is furious that a proclamation expected to be read at Wednesday night's City Council meeting expresses that take. However, those who penned the words say it's being misinterpreted.

The proclamation seeks to designate Monday, Oct. 11, as Indigenous Peoples' Day in the city of Geneva and was authored by the Community Education for Transformation, which said it is an “independent, nonpartisan collaboration of educators, broadly defined, committed to innovative and inclusive ways of learning, listening, and teaching within and across Geneva's communities.” Members include academics connected to Hobart and William Smith Colleges, but they're not the only members. The proclamation reads in part that “whereas, the second Monday in October is the federal holiday of Columbus Day in remembrance of the arrival of Christopher Columbus in the Americas in 1492; and whereas, the City of Geneva recognizes that this event initiated centuries of violence, exploitation, enslavement, acts of genocide,

Invasive insect may be spotted here soon

Lanternfly, which feeds on trees and variety of plants, already is prominent downstate

By DAVID L. SHAW
dshaw@fltimes.com

GENEVA — The Finger Lakes may be invaded by the spotted lanternfly soon. The insect is an invasive pest from Asia that feeds primarily on trees and a variety of plants, including grapevines, hops, maple, walnut and fruit trees. It arrived in Pennsylvania in 2014. They have spread to Delaware, New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia and now New York, starting on Long Island and in downstate areas. They pose a risk to state agricultural and forest health, as they use their sucking mouth parts to feed on the sap of more than 70 plant species, making the plants vulnerable to disease and attacks from other insects. Officials worry that the spotted lanternfly will harm the state's

SF to Seneca-Cayuga Nation: Comply

Okla. group given until Oct. 24 to resolve code issue with Pipekeepers Tobacco & Gas

By DAVID L. SHAW
dshaw@fltimes.com

SENECA FALLS — About a week after Pipekeepers Tobacco & Gas opened at 126 E. Bayard St., Clint Halftown, the Cayuga Nation's federally recognized leader, objected on the grounds it violated town zoning laws. The town has sent a letter dated Sept. 24 to Oklahoma-based Seneca-Cayuga Nation, giving it one month to bring the property into compliance.

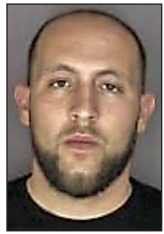

“It has come to the town's attention that there is an apparent violation of the town's zoning code at the property in that it is located in a R-1 residential zone and is being used for commercial purposes and an automobile service station and a local retail business,” Seneca Falls Code Enforcement Officer Richard Stabinsky wrote. “The town hereby requests that you bring the use of this property into compliance with the town's code within 30 days

Plea deal in Geneva homicide

Salone getting 3-6 years in 2017 death of Jawaun Brumfield

By MIKE HIBBARD
mhubbard@fltimes.com

CANANDAIGUA — Two years ago, Jeff Salone Jr. was sentenced to 25 years in prison for killing a suspected burglar during a 2017 incident in Geneva. He will be spending less than a quarter of that time behind bars. Last month, shortly before a retrial was set to begin, Salone pleaded guilty to second-degree manslaughter in the death of Jawaun Brumfield, agreeing to a sentence of 3-6 years as a second felony offender, with credit for time served. Ontario County First Assistant District Attorney Jason MacBride, who prosecuted the case, said Salone will surrender Friday and resume his prison sentence. The retrial had been scheduled to start Monday. Salone likely will spend about two more years in prison, MacBride said Monday. “The family (of Jawaun Brumfield) was consulted with the plea,” he said. “The parents were agreeable but obviously disappointed with the result.” The case dates to September 2017. MacBride and Geneva police believe Brumfield, after climbing a ladder, was pulled into Salone's Hallenbeck Avenue apartment through a window while trying to commit a burglary. During Salone's original trial in 2019, MacBride argued Salone

Want to know more about solar?

Landowners considering a lease may want to attend Oct. 26 session in Waterloo

By DAVID L. SHAW

dshaw@fltimes.com

WATERLOO — The proposed Trelina Solar Energy Center has generated even more interest in solar projects. Many landowners, particularly farm owners and operators, are being approached to lease land to solar energy companies.

That's the case with the Oese-Siegel family, which owns Gem Lake Farms in the town of Waterloo. Trelina wants to lease land from them for its 80 megawatt solar facility.

Cornell Cooperative Extension of Seneca County cautions that before signing on the dotted line, landowners are encouraged to do their due diligence and understand how the process actually works.

"Most often, once a contract is signed, it and the terms it contains are binding," explained CCE representative Judy Wright.

CCE of Seneca County will host "Navigating Solar Leases and the Solar Development Process" from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Oct. 26 in its third-floor conference room downtown, in the Main Street Shop Center.

Farmers and rural landowners are invited to ask questions about solar leasing and hear from experts. There will be live and virtual presentations by industry experts to help participants understand the solar development process, make informed decisions, and decide whether negotiating an agreement is right for them.

The agenda:

- From 9:30-10:15 a.m., Loren Pruskowski, a farmer and representative of Ecolegacy Values, will speak on "Understanding the Solar Development Process and What Solar Companies Are Looking For."

- Attorney Scott Kurkowski will speak from 10:15-11 a.m. on "Understanding Solar Lease Agreements and Tips for Negotiating a Contract."

- A question-and-answer session with Pruskowski and Kurkowski will be conducted from 11-11:30 a.m.

- Lunch will be provided from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

- Jeffrey Kehoe from the state Department of Agriculture & Markets will speak from 12:30-1:30 p.m. on "How Municipal Regulations Affect Solar Development Opportunities at the Local Level."

- There will be an optional opportunity for discussion among in-person participants from 1:30-2:30 p.m.

For those who can't or do not want to attend in person, a virtual option to participate will be offered.

The cost to attend in person, $15, includes lunch. The cost to participate virtually is $5. To register, go to https://reg.cce.cornell.edu/solar-leases_245.

In-person participants are asked to wear face coverings. To ensure social distancing, space may be limited.

Parking is available behind the Shop Center building.

For more information, call (315) 539-9251, ext. 109, or email jlw24@cornell.edu.

Kinney Drugs opens appointments for Covid-19 booster shots

Finger Lakes Times

Kinney Drugs has announced the availability of Covid-19 booster shots following Food and Drug Administration Emergency Use Authorization and new guidance from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

In accordance with CDC recommendations. People who meet the following criteria are now eligible to receive an additional (third) dose:

- Age 65 and older or long-term care residents and had two previous doses of Pfizer vaccine at least six months ago.

- 18-64 years with underlying medical conditions and had two previous doses of Pfizer vaccine at least six months ago.

- 18-64 years who are in occupational or institutional settings where the burden of Covid-19 infection or the risk of transmission are high and had two previous doses of Pfizer vaccine at least six months ago.

- 18 or older and moderately to severely immunocompromised and have received two doses of either the Pfizer or Moderna vaccine.

People who received their second dose of a COVID vaccine at a location other than a Kinney Drugs pharmacy or a Kinney Drugs vaccination clinic should have proof of vaccination to ensure that Kinney pharmacists can administer a third dose without delay.

There is no minimum waiting period between other vaccinations (such as flu, pneumonia, and/or shingles, etc.) and a Covid booster. These vaccinations may be given simultaneously. And, there is no out-of-pocket cost for the Covid booster.

To learn more about eligibility requirements and to schedule a booster shot, go to www.kinneydrugs.com.

Facebook, WhatsApp, Instagram suffer worldwide outage

Facebook, WhatsApp, Instagram suffer worldwide outage — Facebook and its Instagram and WhatsApp platforms were down across wide swathes of the world Monday. Facebook's internal systems used by employees also went down. The company said it was aware that "some people are having trouble accessing (the) Facebook app" and it was working on restoring access. Regarding the internal failures, Adam Mosseri, the head of Instagram, tweeted that it feels like a "snow day." The company did not say what might be causing the outage, which began around 11:45 ET. It is normal for websites and apps to suffer outages, though one on a global scale is rare. Doug Madory, director of internet analysis for Kentik Inc., said it looks like the DNS routes that Facebook makes available to the net-working world have been withdrawn. The Domain Name System is an integral element of how traffic on the internet is routed. DNS translates an address like "facebook.com" to an IP address like 123.45.67.890. If Facebook's DNS records have disappeared, no one could find it. Facebook is going through a separate major crisis after whistleblower Frances Haugen, a former Facebook product manager, provided The Wall Street Journal with internal documents that exposed the company's awareness of harms caused by its products and decisions. He was on "60 Minutes" Sunday.

2 Pediatric cases of Covid-19 are declining in the U.S.:

'Encouraging news' —New Covid-19 cases are declining in the United States, including among children, amid what one expert believes will be the "last major wave of infection." Since Sept. 1, the number of new daily cases of Covid-19 in the United States has declined 35%, The New York Times reports. According to CNN, the U.S. is currently averaging about 107,000 new cases each day, compared to over 150,000 a month ago. Plus, the Times writes, "even pediatric cases are falling, despite the lack of vaccine authorization for children under 12." The American Academy of Pediatrics most recently reported that there was an 8.5 % decline in the number of children who tested positive for COVID-19 during the week ending on Sept. 23, although it was still the fifth consecutive week that there were more than 200,000 cases among kids.

3 Trump is reportedly telling people 'I'm running' and wanted to announce his 2024 campaign in August — As a highly-specified 2024 presidential campaign continues to gain steam, former President Donald Trump is reportedly "constantly" telling people "I'm running," and was actually talked out of announcing his candidacy in August. At first emboldened by the upheaval in Afghanistan, Trump was cautioned against sharing his plans as not to complicate his fundraising and other issues.

New York State in Brief

Rochester mayor resigns in plea deal

ROCHESTER (AP) — Mayor Lovely Warren agreed to resign shortly before her term ends as part of a deal to settle charges she violated campaign finance rules during her 2017 reelection campaign.

Warren was scheduled to go on trial Monday on felony charges she and two assistants took steps to evade contribution limits. Instead, Warren and her two co-defendants pleaded guilty to accepting campaign contributions that exceeded legal limits, according to the Monroe County district attorney's office.

The resignation will provide an early end to a tumultuous mayoral term in New York's third-largest city. Warren had been under heavy criticism for the city's handling of the suffocation death of Daniel Prude, a Black man who died in March 2020, a week after police held him down on a city street for about two minutes until he stopped breathing.

In reaching the plea on the lesser misdemeanor charge, Warren is able to keep her law license and her pension.

Her resignation will be effective by Dec. 1. Warren was set to leave office in January after losing a Democratic primary earlier this year. Deputy Mayor James Smith would finish out the remainder of her term.

Warren faces a year-long conditional discharge along with the agreement to submit her resignation. She did not answer questions from reporters as she left court.

Warren had previously denied any attempt to evade campaign finance rules, blamed errors on sloppy bookkeeping and referred to the investigation as a "political witch hunt."

District Attorney Sandra Doorley called the resolution "fair and just" and said it was an important step in promoting ethical elections.

"Moving forward, the ramifications of the Mayor's conduct spans beyond the criminal justice system. The Monroe County District Attorney's Office is pleased that all three defendants are willing to take responsibility for their actions and admit their wrongdoing," Doorley said in a prepared statement.

The plea deal also resolves separate child endangerment charges against Warren. In July, Warren and husband Timothy Granison pleaded not guilty to unrelated charges stemming from a police raid that allegedly turned up a rifle and pistol, and her 10-year-old daughter alone, in the home they share.

Prude's death received no public attention until months later when his family released police body camera video. Warren had been heavily criticized for the city's handling of Prude's death. She claimed she had no knowledge of Prude's case until his family went public.

But a report commissioned by Rochester's city council faulted her and the former police chief for keeping critical details of the case secret for months and lying to the public about what they knew.

Democratic chairman endorses Hochul

NEW YORK (TNS) — The chairman of New York's Democratic Party endorsed Gov. Hochul for reelection Monday, giving her a major boost from the state's political establishment as she preps for what could become a turbulent gubernatorial primary next year.

Jay Jacobs, who was handpicked for the top state party post by former Gov. Andrew Cuomo, said he's backing Hochul because her "pragmatic" and "moderate" political sensibilities makes her best suited for the November 2022 general election.

"We have a governor we know can win against any Republican they put up in the fall," he told reporters during a press conference on Long Island.

Since being sworn in on Aug. 25 in the wake of Cuomo's resignation, Hochul has also shown she's an excellent chief executive, Jacobs added.

Gino J. Frappolli

SENECA FALLS — Gino J. Frappolli, 88, of 47 Green St., Seneca Falls, N.Y., passed away Saturday (October 2, 2021) after a prolonged illness.

Family and friends may call at the Doran Funeral Home, 4 E. Bayard St., Seneca Falls, on Thursday (October 7) from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Gino's Mass of Christian Burial will be Friday (October 8) at 11 a.m. at St. Patrick's Church, 97 W. Bayard St., Seneca Falls with Reverend James Fennessey as celebrant. Burial will follow in St. Columbkille Cemetery, Seneca Falls.

Contributions, if desired, may be made to the parish office for St. Patrick's Church, 25 Center St., Waterloo, NY 13165.

Gino was born in Seneca Falls, N.Y. on August 21, 1933, the son of the late Peter and Teresa (Rossi) Frappolli. He was a life-long resident of Seneca Falls and a graduate of Mynderse Academy. After graduation, Gino proudly served his country, serving in the U.S. Navy during the Korean War. Gino was retired from Goulds Pumps, Seneca Falls, after 32 years and ended his career as a Manufacturer's Engineer. In his retirement, Gino loved to travel, meet with "The Guys" at the SMS, and play golf. Over the years he had many flower gardens that he enjoyed spending time tending to. Gino was an avid sports fan and loved spending time with his grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Gino was a member of the SMS, American Legion, and St. Patrick's Church, Seneca Falls.

Gino is survived by his beloved wife of 63 years, Phyllis (Fiorelli) Frappolli, whom he married July 26, 1958, of Seneca Falls; two children, Peter (Kim Mellito) Frappolli of Bonita Springs, Fla., and Karen (Victor) Tumbiolo of Seneca Falls; six grandchildren, Michelle (Graham) Chapman of Pembroke, Mass., Anthony Frappolli, Michael Contreras, Victor Tumbiolo II, and Christina Tumbiolo, all of Seneca Falls, and Katherine Frappolli of California; two great-grandchildren, Carter and Scarlett Chapman of Pembroke, Mass.; one sister, Isabella DeSanto; and several nieces and nephews.

In addition to his parents, Gino was predeceased by his brothers, Carlo and Paul Frappolli.

What is it?

Spotted lanternfly nymphs are black with white spots and turn red before transitioning into adults. The black nymphs can be seen as early as April and until July. Red nymphs can be seen from July until September. Adults begin to appear in July and are approximately 1 inch long and a half-inch wide at rest, with eye-catching wings. Their forewings are grayish with black spots. The lower portions of their hindwings are red with black spots and the upper portions are dark with a white stripe. In the fall, adults lay 1-inch-long egg masses on nearly anything from tree trunks and rocks to vehicles and firewood. They are smooth and brownish-gray with a shiny, waxy coating when first laid.

grape and apple crops.

Seneca Lake Pure Waters Association and the Finger Lakes Institute are concerned enough that they are co-sponsoring an emergency response webinar at 10 a.m. Wednesday. The program is for municipal leaders, planners, educators and community advocates, said Hillary Mosher of the Finger Lakes Institute, which is based at Hobart and William Smith Colleges.

"The spotted lanternfly is wreaking havoc downstate and is expected to take a foothold in our region as soon as this fall season," Mosher said. "This webinar will help people learn what the spotted lanternfly is, what its arrival can mean to our communities, and how we can build a response plan for its imminent arrival."

The agenda for Wednesday's webinar:

- 10-10:30 a.m. — An overview of the spotted lanternfly, what it is, what it does and why it causes worry. The presenter will be Brian Eshenauer, senior extension associate at Cornell University and a member of the New York State Integrated Pest Management Team.

- 10:30-11 a.m. — Thom Allgaier, invasive species coordinator for the state Department of Agriculture & Markets, will speak on the state's response to the spotted lanternfly. He will discuss what the response is now, what is being done, and how the impacts can be mitigated.

- 11-11:30 a.m. — Mosher, Linda Svoboda of Cornell Cooperative Extension of Broome County, and Judy Wright of Cornell Cooperative Extension of Seneca County will discuss a response plan, how to mobilize a community, how to develop and disseminate a communication plan, and how to engage stakeholders in the region.

- 11:30 a.m. to 12 noon — A detailed panel and question-and-answer session with experts Dr. Linda Rohleder, Michael O'Neill and Hans Walter-Peterson will be held.

For information on how to register, call the Finger Lakes Institute at (315) 781-4390.

SF to unveil its tentative 2022 budget tonight

By DAVID L. SHAW

dshaw@fltimes.com

SENECA FALLS — The debate over a 2022 town budget begins in earnest with tonight's unveiling of a tentative spending plan.

Supervisor Mike Ferrara said Monday the budget he will propose, with input from a special advisory committee, will include all requests from department heads. He said decisions on possible cuts, additions and revenue sources to offset the tax levy will be made at workshops scheduled for Oct. 25 and 28.

There likely will be debate about how to utilize the estimated $3 million the town expects to receive from Seneca Meadows Inc. through its Host Community Agreement. SMI owns and operates the state's largest landfill on the western border of the town.

As a backdrop to those budget discussions, the town's Local Law 3-2016, requiring SMI to close the landfill by the end of 2025, is being challenged in court.

There already has been much discussion about how to use the landfill revenue in the next four budget cycles, along with planning for the loss of that revenue when Seneca Meadows closes.

Tonight's meeting begins at 6 p.m. in the Community Center on Water Street.

of the date of this letter."

That deadline would be Oct. 24.

Stabinsky told Seneca-Cayuga officials he attached the relevant section of the town zoning code.

"If you believe that this property is not being used in violation of the town code, please contact this office to review the situation," Stabinsky said. "If you intend to bring the property into compliance by seeking a variance from the code, please contact this office and we can assist you with the required forms, etc. If you take no action or make other arrangements with this office within thirty days of the date of this letter, the town will begin formal enforcement action."

As of Monday, Town Clerk Nicki Greer said Seneca Falls had not received a response to Stabinsky's letter.

The Seneca-Cayuga Nation agreed this summer to lease the former Skydancer Smoke Shop and Gas Station, which had been closed the past eight years, to Dustin Parker, a member of the Cayuga Nation. Parker reopened the store Labor Day weekend, selling tobacco products and gasoline despite opposition from the Cayuga Nation and Halftown.

Parker declined to comment when contacted Monday.

The Oklahoma group is an offshoot off the original Cayuga Nation that had a 64,015-acre reservation around the northern end of Cayuga Lake in Seneca and Cayuga counties. The Seneca-Cayuga Nation bought the former Andrews Service Station in 2009 and, after demolishing the building, built a new facility and reopened it in 2011. It closed in 2013 after being raided by agents of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, who seized cash and cigarettes being sold without charging sales tax.

NY mother, son accused of taking Pelosi's laptop

WATERTOWN (AP) — A New York mother and son have been charged with theft in aiding the disappearance of House Speaker Nancy Pelosi's laptop during the Jan. 6 insurrection after the FBI initially raided a home 4,500 miles away in Alaska, looking for the computer.

The FBI on Friday arrested Maryann Mooney-Rondon, 55, and her son, Rafael Rondon, 23, of Watertown, in connection with the stolen laptop. Both also face other charges related to the riot at the Capitol.

Rafael Rondon also faces possession of an unregistered sawed-off shotgun charge

Both appeared in federal court Friday in Syracuse and released pending further proceedings, according to a statement from the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Northern District of New York.

The Capitol riot was well documented by those who took part. Law enforcement used photos from the social media accounts of those who took part to search for the suspects.

A tip to the FBI led them to the mother and son, after it was determined a couple in Alaska did not take the laptop.

Mooney-Rondon allegedly admitted to being in both the Capitol the day of the riots and Pelosi's conference room.

Both mother and son admitted they were the ones depicted in the photos taken at the Capitol during the riots and distributed by the FBI, the document says.

It was not disclosed if the laptop was found with the Rondons. The search of the home of a couple in Alaska was blamed on mistaken identity.

and displacement of Indigenous people across the Americas and specifically within the land that today constitutes the United States of America; and whereas, the City of Geneva acknowledges that part of that bloody history happened here on the land where our city stands, particularly when troops from the Continental Army invaded the area, destroying homes, orchards, and fields as part of the Sullivan Campaign of 1779; and whereas, the City of Geneva recognizes that for too long the history of the United States has been told in a way that suppresses and misrepresents the stories of the Indigenous peoples of the Americas ..."

DiCostanzo, himself a former city councilor, is urging lodge members to tell City Council "to either reject outright, or at a minimum, to table any consideration of this proclamation."

Ward 5 Councilor Laura Salamendra said she plans to read the proclamation at the request of Jess Farrell, a member of Community Education for Transformation and one of authors of the proclamation. Farrell said critics of the proclamation are misinterpreting its intention, and she provided a letter sent to City Council clarifying the thrust of the document.

Farrell

"To many in our diverse population (locally and nationally), Columbus Day is a celebration of a very painful history. Columbus is connected to a narrative of 'discovery' that erases Indigenous communities by suggesting that there were no people in North America before the arrival of Europeans (how else could it be 'discovered'?). Furthermore, the arrival of Europeans inaugurated efforts to eradicate Indigenous cultures. It is not surprising or hard to understand why many communities would find a day celebrating this history offensive."

"But it is also important to say that this is not to ignore or deny that, for Italian Americans, Columbus Day means something very different. Our proclamation in no way cancels Columbus Day; it simply suggests that the City of Geneva add a local recognition of Indigenous Peoples' Day to its already existing recognition of the federal holiday of Columbus Day. It is important that these two recognitions be on the same day, as the histories are intertwined."

The group provided Council with an annotated proclamation that further explains the verbiage.

For example, it takes on the section that reads, "whereas, the City of Geneva recognizes that this event initiated centuries of violence, exploitation, enslavement, acts of genocide, and displacement of Indigenous people across the Americas and specifically within the land that today constitutes the United States of America ..."

The proclamation

The following proclamation is expected to be read at Wednesday's Geneva City Council meeting:

"Whereas, the second Monday in October is the federal holiday of Columbus Day in remembrance of the arrival of Christopher Columbus in the Americas in 1492; and

"Whereas, the City of Geneva recognizes that this event initiated centuries of violence, exploitation, enslavement, acts of genocide, and displacement of Indigenous people across the Americas and specifically within the land that today constitutes the United States of America; and

"Whereas, the City of Geneva acknowledges that part of that bloody history happened here on the land where our city stands, particularly when troops from the Continental Army invaded the area, destroying homes, orchards, and fields as part of the Sullivan Campaign of 1779; and

"Whereas, the City of Geneva recognizes that for too long the history of the United States has been told in a way that suppresses and misrepresents the stories of the Indigenous peoples of the Americas; and

"Whereas, the City of Geneva acknowledges the United States' indebtedness to the continent's Indigenous people for the lessons in democracy and governance that they shared with the country's founders, particularly through the Haudenosaunee Great Law of Peace; and

"Whereas, the City of Geneva would like to celebrate and express its appreciation for the vibrant and civically engaged Indigenous communities that continue to make vital contributions to our country and our city today;

"Now, Therefore Be it Resolved that October 11, 2021 is officially Indigenous Peoples' Day in the City of Geneva."

neva recognizes that this event initiated centuries of violence, exploitation, enslavement, acts of genocide, and displacement of Indigenous people across the Americas and specifically within the land that today constitutes the United States of America ..."

"Here you will see that we intentionally used the word 'initiated,' " they write.

Columbus

"This is explicitly not blaming Columbus (the man) for all of these things, but it is acknowledging that his arrival in what is now the Americas was the start of the enduring attacks on Indigenous people. It is important to think about how a day celebrating the arrival of Columbus is simultaneously celebrating the initiation of genocide against part of our community and that different segments of our diverse population will interpret this day differently."

DiCostanzo said this is a local example of a national movement to replace Columbus Day with Indigenous Peoples' Day and that such a move is an affront to many Italian-Americans who believe the explorer is being discredited.

"The Italian-American community here and across the country are not opposed to the establishment of Indigenous Peoples' Day, as Native Americans are richly deserving of this recognition," DiCostanzo wrote to Council. "However, when there are 365 days on the calendar to pick a day for such recognition, and you decide to publicly insult our Italian-American residents, and the 20 million-plus Americans in the United States of Italian descent by removing a holiday we have come to celebrate as a symbol of all the tremendous contributions of Italians and Italian-Americans throughout history in the areas of art, science, music, mathematics, and yes, discovery, then you will surely draw our anger by doing so."

and some friends were waiting for Brumfield — he reportedly had burglarized the apartment before — and beat him for about 20 minutes, leaving him unconscious by the time police arrived.

Brumfield, 23, died the next day at Strong Memorial Hospital in Rochester.

No one else was arrested.

Salone was convicted of first-degree manslaughter but acquitted of murder. He was sentenced by Ontario County Judge Brian Dennis to the maximum 25 years in prison, but an appeals court overturned the conviction about a year and a half later.

The court ruled Dennis should not have allowed some trial testimony from Geneva police Det. Steve Vine, who said he was skeptical of Salone's claim he was alone and acted in self-defense. Vine believed Brumfield was the victim of a homicide. The court also ruled Dennis should not have allowed Brumfield's mother to testify about her son's personal background.

Salone did not testify in the trial, but in a statement to police he said he was sleeping when he was awakened by a loud noise. He said he saw a Black male come through a kitchen window carrying a Taser and reaching for a knife, leading to a fight. Salone said he flipped the intruder, and the intruder's head hit a coffee table. He said he hit the intruder when he tried to get up and then said the intruder was unconscious and "breathing funny."

Salone, 32, was represented by attorney Christopher Rodeman in the first trial. He is now represented by attorney James Nobles, who did not return an email seeking comment on the plea deal.

POLICE BEAT

Those charged are presumed innocent

ONTARIO COUNTY

PHELPS — William S. Lockwood, 60, of Torrey, was charged Friday by the sheriff's office with second-degree criminal mischief, second-degree reckless endangerment, and reckless driving.

Lockwood is accused of driving his vehicle into another person's vehicle several times — intentionally — during a road rage incident that started on the Thruway and ended on Route 14 in Phelps. Police said the incident started when the other person passed Lockwood and changed lanes in front of him. Lockwood eventually forced the other vehicle off the road, police added.

HOPEWELL — Ariel N. Ferrer, 30, of Hopewell, was charged Friday by state police with third-degree sexual abuse.

CANANDAIGUA — Day'Janique Cooper, 24, of Greece, was charged Wednesday by city police with second-degree criminal impersonation and second-degree aggravated unlicensed operation.

Cooper allegedly gave police a false name after a traffic stop.

CANANDAIGUA — Jessica G. Schojan, 46, of Farmington, was charged Sept. 21 by city police with endangering the welfare of a child.

Police said Schojan fought with another person in the presence of two minors.

CANANDAIGUA — Julian J. Cooper, 31, of Canandaigua, was charged Sept. 16 by city police with endangering the welfare of a child.

Police said Cooper was under the influence of a controlled substance in the presence of two minors.

CANANDAIGUA — Justin P. Lloyd, 33, of Geneva, was charged Sept. 13 by city police with fourth-degree grand larceny.

Lloyd is accused of stealing more than $1,000 in property from the Speedway gas station.

CANANDAIGUA — Susan Nemitz, 39, of Canandaigua, was charged Sept. 1 by city police with second-degree criminal contempt.

Nemitz allegedly violated the terms of a court order of protection.

SENECA COUNTY

ROMULUS — An 18-year-old local male was charged by state police Saturday with second-degree burglary and fourth-degree conspiracy.

Police, who did not disclose the teen's name, said the charges stemmed from a July incident.

WAYNE COUNTY

GALEN — Cory J. Perez, 28, of Clyde, was charged Sunday by state police with first-degree criminal contempt.

GALEN — Joseph A. Slate, 40, of Galen, was charged Sunday by state police with endangering the welfare of a child.

LETTER TO THE EDITORNurse pulled plug on blood draw over vaccination

To the Editor:
On Sept. 14, I went to have blood work done as ordered by my primary care provider. I was in the chair at Geneva General Hospital with my arm stretched out and a tourniquet on my arm. I said to the nurse about to draw my blood, "Are you vaccinated?" She said, "That is none of your business." I was shocked and said, "I have read that the Canandaigua hospital system expects to have 500 vacancies because they can't find enough vaccinated workers." She said, "I don't feel comfortable drawing your blood today. You will have to come back another day." She then took the tourniquet off and handed my blood work request sheet back to me! I was stunned.
Two days later I went back to the same blood draw location and had a different nurse. After she drew my blood I said, "I am curious about something. Are you vaccinated?" She said "I am, why?" I told her I had been there two days earlier and had asked the nurse if she was vaccinated, was told it was none of my business and then she wouldn't draw my blood. This nurse said, "Yeah. I am sorry." I think she knew who I was talking about.
My wife told our dentist what happened. He can't believe that there are medical professionals who don't want to get Covid-19 shots. He assured my wife that everyone in his office had been vaccinated.
I would have thought that everyone working in the medical field would have been enthusiastic promoters of this Covid-19 vaccine. America's hospitals are overflowing with unvaccinated patients with Covid. The chances of dying from it are 11 times greater for unvaccinated people than for those who are vaccinated. Elective surgeries are being postponed. It has happened that unvaccinated parents have both died, sometimes just days apart, leaving young children behind! I just don't understand this at all.
We all got vaccinated for polio, smallpox, etc., at a young age, did we not? In most schools, it is mandatory that you have those shots before you enter kindergarten. I never heard of any protests about them over the last 100 years. But that was before the last president called Covid-19 a "Democratic hoax" at a huge rally on Feb. 28, 2020.
My wife and I are senior citizens. We try to avoid being around any unvaccinated adults if we are aware of them.

The return of the house show

Over the past 18 months, concerts have been held on a wish and a prayer. The bigger the venue, the greater the hesitancy — and for good reason. But adaptability and the soul's need for music and community have combined to foster the resurgence of an old faithful: the house show.

In the late spring and summer of 2020, news organizations all across the country began reporting on "porch concerts." As the name suggests, these at-home performances welcomed musicians to play on the front porch, with attendees taking in the show from lawn chairs spaced six feet apart. Such porch concerts met a variety of social and personal needs during the height of the pandemic, including opportunities for musicians to practice and perform, neighborhoods to keep close ties, and music-lovers to enjoy the live experience they crave. These events weren't tied to any organization or network — people simply saw the idea on the internet or the news and said, "Hey, we should host one of these." And a movement was born.

My band, The Local Hang-Ups, had the pleasure of playing one of these porch concerts at a home in the Chili area around that time. It was our second in-person show as a duo and, after three months of mostly social isolation, we were a little nervous but excited. Live streams just cannot compare to live faces. We played on a small concrete deck at the front of the house to about 20 people, all spread out around the yard.

Finally performing the songs we had written during quarantine was fun, but it didn't compare to the time of fellowship that followed. The folks I met and the conversations we had were really special, and I was struck by how life-giving such a small concert could be — especially in these times. In fact, the last few minutes turned into a sort of open-mic, with everyone sharing a song or two they keep in their back pocket for when a guitar gets passed around.

What I love most about this format is the personal intimacy it suggests. Don't get me wrong, I love a good CMAC show (Death Cab for Cutie's performance there in 2014 is still one of my favorites), but the odds that such a large concert will strengthen local ties are slim. There's a warmth in inviting your neighbors over for drinks and a backyard performance, chatting with the artist after the show, and getting to know more about the people who live on your street. Music is a universal language, creating a commonality between even the most disparate groups. We all have more in common than we think.

Even as we enter autumn, house shows are still popping up all over our region — though many have moved from the porch to the living room. If you haven't heard of one to attend, maybe consider hosting one yourself! Healthy communities start with willing hearts who aren't afraid to knock on doors and invite people through their own. If these times have taught us anything, it's that fostering togetherness in our neighborhoods is more than a social good, but a virtue meeting a very human need.

Bidenville or Trumptown? Our country is fast approaching a point of no return

We Americans are 330,000,000 people trying to find a way to travel together to the same place. Or so we like to think.

In reality our current divisions indicate that we are headed toward different destinations. The metaphor that properly describes the dilemma in front of us is elusive. A crossroads? A fork in the road? A perilous trek along a knife-edged ridge with a disastrous fall on either side? Chutes and Ladders?

However we describe the journey, it's clear that we're not going to the same place. And the point of no return is closer than we think. In fact, we could reach the decision point in weeks, in connection with the fate of the Democrats' "Build Back Better" plan.

Or maybe we have until the midterm elections next year. But, certainly, by no later than the presidential election of 2024 we're going to have to decide who we are and where we're going.

Extending the metaphor, let's call one of the destinations Trumptown. Overly dramatic? Maybe. But it's dangerously naïve to underestimate the remarkable endurance of the former president, as well as the grip he maintains on the Republican Party.

The Republicans already have a built-in head start on the road to Trumptown. They're able to use simple battle cries (Low taxes! Small government! Personal freedom!) to good advantage over Democrats, who can never run on high taxes, big government and restricted liberty.

Further, Republicans have exploited the advantages that our system provides to the political minority: the filibuster, the Electoral College, the gerrymander and disproportionate representation in the Senate.

Advantages such as these should work both ways, but they can easily swing the pendulum so far in one direction that it can never swing back.

And then there's Donald Trump. The blind devotion of his disciples should concern us as much as his politics. Polls find that as much as 70 percent of Republicans believe — erroneously — that the 2020 election was stolen, and the figure appears to be growing.

How deranged is this position? The day after the Arizona audit Trump said that Biden "didn't win in Arizona. He lost in Arizona based on the forensic audit." But the audit — mounted by Republicans for the predetermined purpose of proving the election in Maricopa County was rigged against Trump — showed just the opposite.

And yet Trump is clearly planning to run in 2024, and he's likely to win the Republican nomination. But Trumptown is a fantasyland. Are you sure you want to go there?

I'd prefer Bidenville. But getting there depends heavily on the passage of some version of his $3.5 trillion plan to provide an array of civilized benefits that most Americans want, including a significant percentage of Republicans.

These are things such as lower prescription drug prices, child tax credits, more affordable college and, at long last, measures that pay attention to climate change. These are not the features of some socialist utopia; they're merely some of the privileges that advanced countries have been awarding themselves for years. It's a chance for us to catch up.

But Biden's plan has two things working against it. First, Republicans harbor a deep reluctance to allow the Democrats anything that looks like a win.

And, second, the cost. Republicans never tire of reminding us of the $3.5 trillion price tag.

Still, perspective is called for: Over a decade, the price tag amounts to $350 billion per year. That's still a lot of money, but it's less than half of what we spend annually on defense.

We spend $100 billion per year on our pets. We spend $62 billion on cosmetics. We spend somewhere between $200 billion and $300 billion on stress-related illnesses. I'm not suggesting we get rid of our dogs and cats, but I wonder if the benefits of Biden's plan could help us get rid of some of our stress.

In any case, two starkly different visions of our future are currently in conflict. By no later than 2024, we'll have chosen. May we choose wisely; there will be no turning back.

FLCC graduates largest high school equivalency class

This year's graduates of FLCC's HSE program make up its largest ever class.

CANANDAIGUA — Finger Lakes Community College celebrated 133 high school equivalency graduates recently, its largest class ever, in part due to the addition of distance learning during the pandemic.

About two dozen opted to participate in a ceremony in late August, held outdoors to reduce the risk of exposure to the virus that causes COVID-19.

Kathleen Guy, director of adult basic education for the college, said the state Education Department's decision to add distance learning and to accept previous Regents credit made it possible for more people to complete the program.

FLCC's program allows people to work at their own pace with an instructor to prepare for the five exams necessary to earn a high school equivalency diploma.

Information about FLCC's high school equivalency and English as a second language programs is available at fllc.edu/abe or by calling (585) 785-1544. Classes are offered online and in-person days and evenings in Ontario, Wayne and Yates counties.

The graduates by county and town are as follows:

FLCC offering community classes this fall

CANANDAIGUA — Finger Lakes Community College is offering a series of fall community education classes, including Spanish for beginners and planning for retirement. The time commitment and costs vary.

Registrations for these classes can be made at fllc.edu/workforce. Anyone with questions may email to workforce@fllc.edu.

All those receiving instruction at an FLCC site must provide proof of COVID-19 vaccination prior to the start of class.

A list of classes with days, times, locations and costs is as follows:

Writing in Nature, Geneva Campus Center, began Oct. 4

Adjunct faculty member Kathy Fuchs will teach a two-session course on describing the splendor of the Finger Lakes area. Students will listen briefly to other nature writers and look at models for prose and poetry on Mondays, Oct. 4 and 11 from 6-7:30 p.m. at the Geneva Campus Center, 63 Pulteney St. The cost is $23 per student.

Beginner Spanish, Geneva Campus Center, begins Oct. 14

Nancy Valez-Anderson will teach Beginner I Conversational Spanish, an eight-week class that runs Thursdays, from Oct. 14 through Dec. 9 from 6-8:30 p.m. at the Geneva Campus Center, 63 Pulteney St. This class is designed for those with no background in Spanish, particularly those who may find language skills helpful in their current and future employment. The class costs $140.

Investing in a Successful Retirement, Online, begins Oct. 19

This four-week online seminar meets online on Tuesdays from 7 to 9 p.m., starting Oct. 19. It introduces participants to a conservative approach to money management and will help identify lifestyle issues facing retirees. Training includes a comprehensive seminar workbook and a retirement planning template that will help participants develop a retirement budget and a written inventory of assets, income, Social Security, and pension benefits. The cost is $29.

A Mindful Approach to Nutrition and Good Health, Victor Campus Center, begins Oct. 25

Izy Grooms, associate professor in the nutrition and dietetics program, teaches this three-week class on Mondays from 6-7:30 p.m., starting Oct. 25 at the Victor Campus Center, 200 Victor Heights Parkway. Participants will learn how to eat mindfully, how to add one habit at a time to improve health, and how eating healthy is not as hard as you think. The cost is $30.

Household Budgeting Basics: Ways to Improve Your Household Finance, Online or Victor Campus Center, begins Nov. 8

Christopher McNamara, associate professor of business, leads this one-time class on Monday, Nov. 8 from 6:30-8 p.m. at the Victor Campus Center, 200 Victor Heights Parkway. It will focus on the basics of creating a budget, along with a conversation on ways for individuals to save money. Topics include why budgeting is important, the basics of a balance sheet and income statement, and the characteristics of a budget. The

Bubba Wallace earns 1st NASCAR victory

By ALEX ANDREJEV

The Charlotte Observer

Bubba Wallace won NASCAR's playoff Cup race at Talladega to become the first Black driver in nearly 60 years to win a race at NASCAR's top level. Wendell Scott last won a Cup race in Jacksonville, Fla. in 1963.

Monday's superspeedway event was red-flagged for rain with around 70 laps remaining and Wallace, driver of the No. 23 Toyota, in the lead.

The race was considered official after reaching the halfway point, and NASCAR called drivers to a stop when more rain hit the track following an earlier rain-related delay. Lightning in the area compounded the weather hold, and eventually the call was made to end the race early just before 4:30 p.m. ET. Wallace watched atop his team's pit box, then hugged his teammates as 23XI crew members cheered from below upon receiving the news.

Wallace won his first race in the Cup Series in 143 starts and his first race with the Michael Jordan and Denny Hamlin co-owned team, 23XI Racing, which is in its first year in the series.

Penske teammates Brad Keselowski finished in second and Joey Logano finished in third.

Syracuse standout WR Taj Harris to enter transfer portal

SYRACUSE (AP) — Syracuse wide receiver Taj Harris plans to transfer.

Orange coach Dino Babers confirmed Monday that the junior has decided to enter the transfer portal. Babers said he spoke to Harris before Saturday's game at Florida State and afterward. Babers said Harris, who did not travel to Florida with the team, decided "the best opportunity for him" would be to transfer.

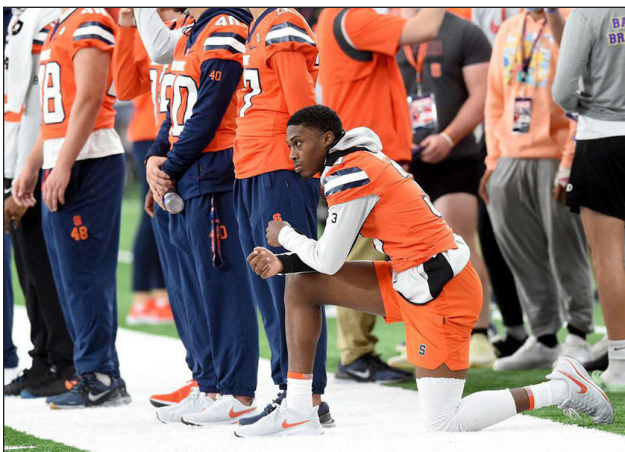

Harris, who also did not play in the previous game against Liberty, announced his decision Sunday on social media. He has two years of eligibility remaining.

The speedy 6-foot-2, 180-pound Harris set Syracuse rookie records for receptions and receiving yards in 2018 with 40 catches for 565 yards.

He was a third-team, All-Atlantic Coast Conference selection in 2020, when he had 58 catches for 733 yards and five TDs, and had 16 catches for 171 yards in three games this season. He finishes his Syracuse career

Another huge Yankees moment is here for Gerrit Cole

By KRISTIE ACKERT

New York Daily News/TNS

BOSTON — This is the moment when Gerrit Cole can earn more than that record-setting paycheck. The Yankees ace takes the ball on Tuesday night in the American League Wild Card Game with one chance to keep the Bombers' so far disappointing season alive. It's his chance to put himself in the long and storied history of the franchise — and he can do it against the Red Sox, their longest and most hated rivals in Fenway.

Cole knows what is at stake.

"As a kid growing up watching Pedro (Martinez) and Roger (Clemens) duke it out — didn't quite catch Roger at the beginning when he was here, or (Andy Pettitte) against Pedro, or Pettitte against any big-time Red Sox guys, what a fantastic game to watch," Cole said before going out and throwing on the field at Fenway Monday evening in the light rain. "You're dreaming about putting yourself in that position, coming through for your team, and here we are." The history and pomp and circumstance around this game will mean nothing when Cole takes the mound on Tuesday night. He will face a lineup that knows him well, going against the Red Sox ace Nathan Eovaldi with everything on the line. These are the stakes Cole said he wanted when he signed with the Yankees.

"When you're here, it's a validation of all the stuff that you've put in and all the challenges that you've had to overcome," Cole said. "Not just anybody gets to play in these games, so I think that's why we all enjoy the opportunity to do that."

The ace has had his ups and downs this season.

Cole came out early as the best pitcher in the league and then became the poster boy for pitchers using illegal sticky stuff on the balls in June when MLB decided to enforce its own rules more stringently. He regained control of his season, adjusted and then missed time when he contracted COVID-19. He got back on track and then whether it was a tight hamstring or the workload (181.1 innings pitched af-

Brewerton Speedway prepares for Super DIRTcar Series

Brewerton Speedway's Demon 100 will kick start 'Racing's Biggest Party' as the Super DIRTcar Series invades the D-shaped oval Tuesday night.

The $10,000 to win event will stand as the lid-lifter of the 49th annual Super DIRT Week extravaganza. Matt Sheppard is chasing his eighth career Super DIRTcar Series Championship, which would put him atop the career championship list, passing Brett Hearn. The pair are currently tied with seven titles each.

Mat Williamson, fresh off a $20,000 victory in Fulton's Outlaw 200 this weekend, has moved up the point standings and is hoping to bank some important points as the season draws to a close. He is chasing Peter Britten, who scored a series win earlier this year at Land of Legends Raceway.

Brewerton is also home of DIRTcar stars Jimmy Phelps, Larry Wight, Chris Hile, Tim Sears Jr., and Billy Decker. Ronnie Davis III, Tom Sears Jr., Pat Ward, Tyler Trump, and Michael Maresca also called Brewerton home on Friday nights.

The Demon 100 winner will also be granted guaranteed starter status for the Billy Whittaker Cars 200 on Sunday, Oct. 10. In the event the race winner is already a guaranteed starter, the spot will drop down to the next highest finishing driver that is not yet guaranteed. Drivers already locked into the Billy Whittaker Cars 200 include Stewart Friesen, Demetrios Drellos, Max McLaughlin, Matt Sheppard, Chris Hile, Andy Bachetti, Billy Decker, and Mike Mahaney.

Sheppard won four of the last five Super DIRTcar Series stops at Brewerton, including four straight from 2016-18; he also won in 2009 and 2010, with only Billy Decker (2008, 2015), Dale Planck (2007) and Williamson (2019) finding victory lane aside of the No. 9s.

The Demon is set to go at 7 p.m., and will run along with the DIRTcar Pro Stocks.

During the day at Oswego, early tech inspections will run until 6 pm for all Super DIRT Week entries, with inspections for Brewerton's Demon 100 conducted from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Wednesday, the 50th anniversary Super DIRT Week announcement will be made at noon, along with the parade through the city of Oswego. Cars will hit the track for ter just 91 in 2020), Cole is coming into this start with a 6.35 ERA over his last four.

“He had a couple shaky starts recently but mixed with some good ones,” said Cole’s personal catcher Kyle Higashioka, who will be behind the plate. “I just have no doubt that he’s going to come out and make sure that he’s got his best stuff. You know, he’s a guy that rises to the occasion.”

That is what was expected when the Yankees gave him a nine-year $324 million deal before last season. It will be the only hope the Bombers have to avoid another disappointing season to add to the last 11. The key for the Red Sox is trying to get some runs against Cole early.

“The difference is the Yankees’ bullpen. The Red Sox have to get some runs and separation early to give their relievers some room to breath,” one American League scout said. “They have shown they can hit Cole. They have to jump on him early and then hope their bullpen holds up.”

The Red Sox have hit Cole hard in four starts this season. They have hammered him for five home runs — second only to the Blue Jays this season — and have a .279/.340/.512 with a .852 OPS against him in 2021.

“The familiarity probably has its advantages for me, probably has its advantages for them,” Cole said of facing the dangerous lineup for the fifth time this year. “And in terms of overall advantage to each side, it’s probably relatively balanced. So just got to go out and execute and play some good ball.”

Boston won’t be his only challenge.

Cole admitted to making adjustments this season after the crackdown on sticky substances. While he says that the tightness in his left hamstring that forced him out of his Sept. 7 start in the fourth inning is gone, talent evaluators watching the last four starts have wondered if it is still bothering him.

Tuesday night is forecasted to be a high of 59 degrees and wet, and those are not ideal conditions for not either issue. The cold can tighten muscles and it certainly makes a baseball harder to grip.

“Every game presents little challenges, whether it’s weather, whether it’s footing on the mound. That’s always something different that happens every game, not every game is the same,” Cole said. “You just adapt when those things come up. I’s not a really big deal.”

But every detail is important to Cole and the outcome of Tuesday night is a very big deal to the Yankees and the organization. This is Cole’s moment to earn not just that contract, but his place in the history of this rivalry.

with 151 receptions for 2,028 yards and 10 touchdowns and four 100-yard games.

The Orange (3-2, 0-1 ACC) have dropped to the bottom of the conference in passing offense, averaging 171 yards per game, and have only three scoring passes, the fewest in the league.

Babers has started dual-threat quarterback Garrett Shrader the past two games in place of Tommy DeVito. Shrader rushed 32 times for 190 yards and five TDs and was 19 of 38 passing for 227 yards and one TD. DeVito, the starter the previous two seasons and more of a pocket passer, is 32 of 52 for 388 yards and two TDs on the season.

Harris is the fifth Syracuse player to leave this year. He joins DB Ben Labrosse, RB Jarveon Howard, OL Cody Shear, and TE Landon Morris.

More on the AL wild card game

Longtime rivals Red Sox, Yankees, back at it in AL wild card

By JIMMY GOLEN

The Associated Press

BOSTON — Oh, it’s on. A day before he is scheduled to face the Red Sox in the AL wild-card game, New York Yankees ace Gerrit Cole dropped the name that dare not be spoken within the confines of Fenway Park — at least not since the last one-game playoff between the longtime rivals was decided by a light-hitting short-stop popping the go-ahead homer over the Green Monster.

“Bucky Dent, right?” Cole said when asked what he knew about the history between the teams. “You’re dreaming about putting yourself in that position, and coming through for your team. And here we are.”

Forty-three years after Dent’s homer helped the Yankees beat Boston to break a tie for the AL East title, the teams meet again for one game, with the winner this time advancing to face the Tampa Bay Rays in an AL Division Series.

Cole (16-8) faces Nathan Eovaldi (11-9) in Boston, where Dent homered, where Tek shoved A-Rod, where Roger returned, where Pedro pushed Zimmer and where Dave Roberts stole second to make everyone all-but forget about everything that happened up until then.

“There’s a buzz here,” said New York manager Aaron Boone, himself a Boston beater with an 11th-inning, walk-off home run in Game 7 of the 2003 AL Championship Series at Yankee Stadium.

“It matters here. It’s fun to compete in games here. It’s tough to compete in games here,” Boone said. “Yeah, I think there will be some tension, electricity. Everything you could hope for for a winner-take-all game in the playoffs and two outstanding franchises and teams.”

It will be the fifth time the teams have met in the playoffs — the 1978 tie-breaker counted as part of the regular season — with each club winning twice. In postseason games, New York leads 12-11, but Boston has won seven of the last eight.

Twice series have come down to a win-or-go-home seventh game, in the 2003 and ’04 ALCS. Each team has won one of them.

Red Sox manager Alex Cora, who arrived in Boston as a player in 2005, right after the most recent heyday of the rivalry, said back then it was fueled by players such as David Ortiz, Manny Ramirez, Derek Jeter and Jorge Posada.

“It was more about the characters, the players, bigger-than-life,” he said. “It was like, ‘Wow, these guys are unbelievable.’”

“They used to fight, too, back in the day, so I think that gave it a little bit more for the fan base,” Cora said. “We have great players ... two teams are playing for the same thing. Throughout the season, it’s been a roller-coaster ride.”

With baseball returning to a full, 162-game schedule after the pandemic-shortened 2020 season, the Red Sox held the edge over the Yankees for most of the year but fell behind after a New York sweep in Boston from Sept. 24-26. The Red Sox swept the Nationals on the final weekend while the Yankees lost two of three to the AL East champion Rays to finish tied at 92-70; Boston earned home-field advantage by virtue of its 10-9 head-to-head record against New York.

That helped avoid tie-breakers that would have necessitated a Game 163 on Monday in Boston.

It’s a good thing, too.

Rain fell steadily in the city, and the tarp never came off the Fenway infield for what became a workout day for the wild-card qualifiers. The Yankees made it optional, with about half the team coming to the ballpark but doing their work indoors; about a dozen Red Sox played catch in the outfield.

The forecast for Tuesday is for the rain to stop in the morning and temperatures in the high 50s.

Boone said he expected infielder Gio Urshela, who bruised his thigh making a sensational catch of a foul ball Sunday in the clincher against Tampa Bay, to be able to play against Boston. Cora was noncommittal about slugger J.D. Martinez, who slipped on second base as he was running out to his position in the outfield against Washington on Sunday.

Cora said he expected to play Christian Arroyo at second and Kevin Plawewski at catcher. There’s “a good chance” Jarren Duran will be on the roster, Cora said.

Left-hander Chris Sale, who threw 62 pitches on Sunday but is coming back from Tommy John surgery, tried to make the case for a spot on the roster in case he is needed in the bullpen, but Cora shut it down.

“He actually threw today. He felt good. He stopped by the office and (I was) like, ‘No, we’re not doing that,’” Cora said. “Hopefully he has a chance to start again here in October.”

Mets let go Rojas, set for overhaul

By MIKE FITZPATRICK

AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The season was going so well for the New York Mets. And then Jacob deGrom got hurt.

Minus their injured ace, the Mets collapsed over the final two months and plunged to 77-85 in Steve Cohen’s first year as owner. They got outmaneuvered by close rivals at the July 30 trade deadline and finished third in the NL East, 11 1/2 games behind division champion Atlanta.

In other words, not even close.

It was a precipitous drop for a $186 million team that spent 103 days in first place — the most ever for a club to finish with a losing record.

“We dealt with a lot of adversity this year. Lots of up and downs,” star short-stop Francisco Lindor said.

On Monday, the fallout began when Luis Rojas was let go as manager.

A season that began with a fresh outlook and real promise thanks to Cohen’s deep pockets and Lindor’s arrival was plagued in the end by the same sort of embarrassing episodes that have characterized the Mets for years.

Lindor clashed with double-play partner Jeff McNeil in the walkway just behind the dugout — and then gave a goofy explanation for the altercation.

Javier Báez and Lindor ticked off fans and the front office with their thumbs-down celebration intended to mock booing crowds.

And acting general manager Zack Scott was arrested on a charge of driving while intoxicated, hours after attending a team charity event at Cohen’s house. Scott, placed on paid leave, pleaded not guilty to the DWI charge and three traffic violations.

On the field, the Mets went 21-37 from Aug. 1 through the final day of their fourth losing season in five years — and 10th in the last 13. New York has made the playoffs twice in the past 15 seasons, advancing only in 2015 on the way to a World Series appearance.

So what happened this time?

Truth be told, deGrom’s first-half dominance and some charmed wins led by bench players against a soft portion of the schedule despite a wave of early injuries probably masked a few warts that became all too evident down the stretch.

The lineup languished even when healthy, and an overtaxed pitching staff started to crack after deGrom (7-2, 1.08 ERA) went down in mid-July with a sprained elbow that sidelined him the rest of the season.

The team says the injury has healed and the two-time Cy Young Award winner is expected to be at full strength in spring training and ready to resume a normal workload.

Lindor (.230 batting average) was a huge disappointment in his New York debut after coming over in a blockbuster trade with Cleveland and signing a $341 million, 10-year contract that starts next season. He missed more than five weeks in the second half with an oblique injury and didn’t emerge from his season-long slump until too late.

His three-homer game at Citi Field on a Sunday night in September to win a Subway Series against the Yankees was a rare highlight.

An untimely 2-11 stretch against the Dodgers and Giants, baseball’s top two teams, dropped the Mets from five games over .500 and tied for first place to 62-66 and 6 1/2 games out on Aug. 26. In a middling division, they lost the lead for good on Aug. 14 and never really recovered before getting eliminated from postseason contention on Sept. 25 with more than a week remaining.

A missed opportunity. So what’s next?

ROJAS OUT

The team declined its option on Rojas’ contract for 2022, and said he’d been offered the opportunity to remain in the organization in a role still to be determined. The Mets said decisions about the coaching staff will be made in the next several days.

“I want to share such heartfelt gratitude to so many in the Mets organization for not only the last two seasons as manager, but for the last 16 years in a variety of roles,” Rojas said in a statement released by the team.

“We live in a results-oriented business, and am deeply disappointed for our staff and fans that we didn’t reach our goals this season,” he said.

Williamson wins Outlaw 200

Mat Williamson won the Outlaw 200, becoming the first Canadian to score a win in the prestigious affair.

Williamson forged the winning pass on lap 177, slipping past a strong Tim Sears in convincing fashion. Sears was out front for a significant portion of the 200, and at one point held an eight second advantage. Sears used the race to build confidence in his mount for Super DIRT Week; Matt Sheppard raced to third ahead of Larry Wight and Tim Fuller. Matt Janczuk won the Outlaw 200 Weekend Sportsman Shootout. Starting 19th, Janczuk fanned out three wide and passed both Chris Mackey and Zach Sobotka to win the 50-lapper on the final circuit. Janczuk dropped to the bottom under Mackey, and the two touched. Mackey skated up into Sobotka, who stumbled and fell to fifth. Behind Janczuk, Mackey held second ahead of Brandon Carvey, Ryan Dolbear and Sobotka.

Outlaw 200 Weekend Night 1 winners included Chad Homan, who picked up the RUSH Late Model Brian Dolbear tribute 30 over Bryce Davis and Sean Beardsley. Justin Williams won the Mod Lite East Coast Nationals 25, winning over Kyle Demo and Mike Mullen. Mike Stone won the four-cylinder open 25, besting Chuck Powelczyk and Donny Rider. Mark Potter won the novice sportsman feature over Paul DeRuyter and Nick Root. Bob Buono won the Hobby Stock Open 25, leading Glenn Vascise and Ron Hawker at the checkers.

Modern Day Outlaw is Tonight at Utica-Rome

Tuesday, modified pilots have some decisions to make. Utica Rome Speedway will host their Modern Day Outlaw event, with a combined three-division purse that pays in excess of $63,000. The event will serve as the conclusion of the 2021 campaign for Utica-Rome, and the close of the first season under Brett Deyo.

The headline event is the big block/small block Modern Day Outlaw 50, which allows sail panels. The feature will pay $10,000 to win, $1,000 for 10th and $500 to take the green. The 26 car purse will pay more than $38,000.

The Cole Cup returns for the 360 Sprint cars. The 30-lap affair will pay $5,000 to win and $300 to start. The event will be sanctioned by the Patriot Sprint Tour. The Crate 602 Sportsman round out the triple header with a $1,500 to win 25-lap main.

Family meals cause digestion issues

DEAR ABBY: My husband was instructed by his doctor to avoid dairy due to a chronic condition that negatively impacts his daily life. Around the same time, his father and his girlfriend began implementing the keto diet into their lifestyle. We are often invited to their home for game night. She takes pride in preparing a home-cooked meal for everyone. We've been open about my husband's dietary restrictions, but dairy remains a heavily used ingredient in these dishes, and it is often hidden or disguised by a different name depending on its preparation.

She seems to think that because my husband isn't "allergic" to dairy, it's OK for him to consume it. However, because we've both changed our diets to exclude dairy, these visits often end in stomach pains and, for him, other discomforts that may last for days. We enjoy the game nights, but fear a more direct approach will hurt our newfound relationship with his father's soon-to-be bride. What would you suggest? – RESTRICTED IN ARIZONA

DEAR RESTRICTED: I suggest you be VERY direct (and descriptive) with your father-in-law and his soon-to-be fiancée about the effect that dairy products have on your husband! Pain for days? That's terrible. And if your husband's dietary restrictions can't be accommodated, either eat beforehand or bring your own food to the gathering.

DEAR ABBY: I am 55 and have waited for the right man. The only regret I have is that I didn't find him earlier because I went into early menopause at 33. I wish my values weren't so strict, but I have met someone who seems to respect my desire to wait until marriage.

The problem is our relationship has many negatives. We live two hours apart. He loves to gamble. I am educated, and he has a learning disability. Most of the time, I feel like I am in fourth place in his life behind his family, his friends and his gambling. I don't feel he really wants to be with me. I sometimes wonder if it's because of the sex thing. However, I don't want a relationship based on sex. I want him to want to spend his time with me, and I want us to become one and I don't see it happening. I also don't believe he can budget for anything more than paying his bills and gambling the rest of his money.

It doesn't seem like he would choose to be with me rather than with his friends and family. Am I wanting too much? I'm afraid what he is after is security, not a loving relationship where you become one in life. – WAITING FOR MR. RIGHT

DEAR WAITING: I don't think you want too much. What you are searching for is what most people want – a life partner who is considerate, loving and whose values are close to their own. Because you suspect this person is after financial security, please listen to your gut. If you really believe you are four notches down on his list of priorities, do not settle. End this "romance" now.

Male breast growth

DEAR DR. ROACH: I am a 70-year-old male who has been experiencing an increase in breast size (slightly more on the left than the right) over the past year. I am healthy and have taken no medications for the past six months except sildenafil, on an as-needed basis. I am approximately 10-15 pounds overweight, but exercise regularly. Because of male breast cancer of my uncle on my mother's side, I had a mammogram and ultrasound recently, which was negative. What could be the cause of this condition? – B.P.

ANSWER: Gynecomastia, the development of breast tissue in men, is common among newborns, at puberty and again in adulthood, but all for different reasons. For older men, breast cancer is indeed a concern. I am glad your doctor sent you for the appropriate diagnostic tests, even though breast cancer in men is uncommon. It's wise to make sure.

The most likely cause in older men is the lowering of testosterone levels that is normal in a man's 60s and 70s. This can be tested via a simple blood test. Ideally, the testosterone level should be drawn at 8:00 a.m. and then repeated if low. A trial of replacement testosterone is appropriate only if the blood level is low. The sildenafil you are taking (usually prescribed for erectile dysfunction) might be a clue that your testosterone is low.

Your thyroid level ought to be checked, as uncontrolled hyperthyroidism is another cause of gynecomastia.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Send a money-saving or timesaving hint to Heloise, P.O. Box 795001, San Antonio, TX 78279-5001, or you can fax it to 210-HELOISE or email it to Heloise@Heloise.com. I can't answer your letter personally but will use the best hints received in my column.

More dryer safety hints

Dear Readers: I have received a number of great suggestions after we ran a hint in my column about dryer safety. Here's another one:

Dear Heloise: Regarding using the dryer when no one's home or you're asleep. When I might wash a load late at night, I will hang my clothes overnight, outside or inside my house, using my dining chairs or whatever is available at the time. I pretty much hang almost everything. The dryer will fluff for me and take out wrinkles when needed. We need to go back to taking advantage of our free sun, also inside air. – Gloria, Bakersfield, California

Dear Heloise: I wanted to send a response to Luanne Gehrig, whose husband passed and her friends quit calling after a few days. Like Luanne, I lost my husband about 18 months ago. I received several sympathy cards, which I appreciated, and a couple neighbors sent over a deli plate. After a week, people pretty much quit calling, emailing or texting. It was like I was supposed to be "over" my husband being gone after being married for 35 years. It hurt.

Please, friends and family of someone who has lost their loved one ... give them a call, offer to come by and help with dishes, dusting, sorting, etc. Offer to take the person to lunch, or bring lunch to them. I wish I had had support. I guess basically my suggestion to everyone would be this: Reach out, offer help, and just because a person says they don't need anything right then, it doesn't mean they would not welcome a phone call or a hand-written note. – A Widow in Missouri

Dear Readers: This is an important reminder to help our neighbors and friends who have lost a family member, and to stay in touch when people need it the most. – Heloise

CAR TALK

Safety abound on Outback

Dear Car Talk: I talked to you and your brother years ago on your radio show and ended up taking your advice and selling my ancient VW Squareback for a slightly used 1997 BMW coupe. The BMW made me a very sporty professor.

Well, now I have a husband and large dogs and really need to get out of this coupe, which is slowly turning into dust. My husband is a worrier, and he seems to think until COVID-19 is completely over, we can't go look at cars – even though we are vaccinated and we can look at cars outdoors.

Since the man is a worrier, I am thinking that I should leverage his worry into a new or even slightly-used Subaru Outback. How can I convince him that the safety features on that car would make a big difference to our health? – Linda Tell him you're getting the special Outback Remdesivir edition, Linda.

If your man is worried about safety, he should be running to the Subaru dealership – wearing an N95 mask, a face guard and a bio-containment level 3 suit – and thrusting piles of cash at the dealer until they agree to sell you a late model Outback.

Or use one of the late-model used-car delivery services like Shift or Carvana to bring a car of your choice to your driveway.

A new, 2020 or 2019 Outback will protect you in ways that the people who designed your 1997 BMW could never have imagined.

We're living through a revolution in automotive safety right now. And it's all being driven by the push for self-driving cars. As engineers work toward cars that can safely drive themselves, they're creating safety systems that are supplementing human brains and saving lots of lives.

Unlike your BMW, a Subaru with EyeSight (Subaru's name for its safety package) will watch the road ahead, and if it notices a car has slowed or stopped in your path and determines that you're not slowing down quickly enough, it'll alert you, and, if necessary, apply the brakes itself. That's called precollision warning and automatic emergency braking.

If you're daydreaming and trying to figure out where to put the semicolon in the title of your next academic paper, and you start to veer out of your lane, the Outback will correct you and nudge you back into your lane. That's called lane keeping assist.

If someone pulls up into your blind spot on the highway, and you don't notice them, a light will flash on your side view mirror and warn you not to change lanes. That's blind spot monitoring.

And if you're backing out of your driveway, and someone comes down the street out of your view, the car will alert you using rear cross traffic alert.

Best of all, if you're sitting at a traffic light, reading lame email excuses from students whose papers are late and don't notice that the light turned green and the cars ahead of you have moved, the car will use the forward collision sensors and beep at you to get moving.

OK, that won't save your life, but if the guy behind you in a Mayflower moving van lays on his horn, it could cause you to hit the roof and get a welt on your head. So Subaru's looking out for you.

Add that to the all-wheel-drive system, which will keep you safer in wet and snowy weather, and you can make an airtight case that a late model Outback will meaningfully increase your safety. As long as you survive the dealership. Good luck, Linda.

Today in History

The Associated Press

In 1931, Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon completed the first non-stop flight across the Pacific Ocean, arriving in Washington state some 41 hours after leaving Japan.

In 1947, President Harry S. Truman delivered the first televised White House address as he spoke on the world food crisis.

In 1953, Earl Warren was sworn in as the 14th chief justice of the United States, succeeding Fred M. Vinson.

In 1955, a stage adaptation of "The Diary of Anne Frank" by Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett opened at the Cort Theatre in New York.

In 1958, racially-desegregated Clinton High School in Clinton, Tennessee, was mostly leveled by an early morning bombing.

In 1969, the British TV comedy program "Monty Python's Flying Circus" made its debut on BBC 1.

In 1983, Solidarity founder Lech Walesa (Iek vah-WEN'-sah) was named winner of the Nobel Peace Prize.

In 2001, tabloid photo editor Robert Stevens died from inhaled anthrax, the first of a series of anthrax cases in Florida, New York, New Jersey and Washington.

In 2005, defying the White House, senators voted 90-9 to approve an amendment sponsored by Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., that would prohibit the use of "cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment" against anyone in U.S. government custody. (A reluctant President George W. Bush later signed off on the amendment.)

In 2015, the United States, Japan and 10 other nations in Asia and the Americas reached agreement on the landmark Trans-Pacific Partnership trade deal.
